

Henryk Chalupczak - Full Professor, Doctor of Humanities, political scientist and historian. Prodean, Dean, Prorector. In the years 1975 - 2023 employed at the Faculty of Political Science and Journalism of the Maria Curie-Skłodowska University in Lublin /formerly known as the Intercollegiate Institute of Political Science of the Maria Curie-Skłodowska University, then the Faculty of Political Science of the Maria Curie-Skłodowska University/ and, additionally, in the years 2005 - 2023 employed at the Zamojska Academy /formerly known as the State Higher Vocational School in Zamość, then the State University in Zamość/. From 1992 to 2022 a member of the Migration Research Committee of the Polish Academy of Sciences (PAN) /formerly known as the Polish Studies Committee of the PAN, then the Committee on Migration and the Polish Diaspora of the PAN/. Author of over 200 scientific publications. His research interests lie in broadly understood international relations, political science and contemporary history. The most important research fields are: national security; population migration; public policies, including security, ethnic, migration; ethnic and cultural security; national minorities, including in international relations; human rights, bi- and multilateral relations; systemic transformation processes in the global and national dimensions; challenges of globalisation. Initiator and editor of team research completed publishing series: 'Central and Eastern Europe in the process of transformation and integration', "Ethnic politics of contemporary countries of Central and Eastern Europe”, “Migration policy in the face of contemporary challenges”, “Security threats in globalization processes”,. Currently retired.