

Magdalena Kruczek, Master of Laws, assistant at the Institute of Legal Sciences, University of Rzeszów, and PhD candidate in the field of legal sciences at WSPiA - University of Rzeszów. Since 2014, she has worked as an academic instructor, delivering lectures, seminars, workshops, and practical classes in forensics and criminology. She collaborates with the NATO Stability Policing Centre of Excellence in Vicenza, Italy, and is a member of the Polish Forensic Society, specializing in fingerprint analysis. She has participated in the implementation of several training programs, including: Preserving Crime Scene – a course training police officers and military personnel on crime scene examination and evidence preservation; Battlefield Evidence Collection – organized by the NATO Stability Policing Centre of Excellence (COE), Interpol, and the EU; Battlefield Evidence Institutional Level Course – organized by the NATO Stability Policing Centre of Excellence (COE), NATO HQ, and the U.S. Department of State. Her research interests include manuscopy (the identification of individuals based on the image of the skin of the hand) and the role of expert witnesses in criminal proceedings. Correspondence address: makruczek@ur.edu.pl

