

Maria Nicola Buonocore is a PhD candidate at Comenius University in Bratislava and a Research Fellow at the Interdepartmental Research Centre of the University of Naples "Federico II" LUPT. She holds a master's degree in International Relations and Scenario Analysis from the University of Naples Federico II and has completed specialized training in European project planning and management through the UNINA-LUPT program. Mrs Buonocore has worked as a Junior Information Officer at the Parliamentary Assembly of the Mediterranean and has collaborated with Italian think tanks such as the "Istituto Analisi Relazioni Internazionali" and "Opinio Juris." She has presented as a speaker at numerous seminars in Italy and internationally, addressing key topics such as digitalization, innovation, and the Europeanization of policies. Her extensive project experience includes participation in several Erasmus+ initiatives, such as Multidimensional and Multicultural Expertise of Human Resources Professionals (MMEHR) and Digital and Open Education for Equality-Based Resilience (DOER), as well as the CERV project Solidarity in Covid Times (SIC) and the FESR project THINK GREEN. Additionally, she serves on the editorial board of esteemed publications, including the GeoProgress Journal, and has contributed to various research studies, with a few of her publications indexed in Scopus and OpenAIRE. Her research interests focus on digitalization's societal and economic impacts, with particular emphasis on Central and Eastern European countries.