

Paolo Pane, PhD (European Label) in Political Science and European Institutions, is a researcher in Political and Economic Geography at the Department of Political Science of the University of Naples Federico II. A passionate scholar, he is the author of several scientific contributions and has participated as a speaker at numerous academic seminars. In 2014 and 2015, he collaborated with the REGI committee of the European Parliament in Brussels. From 2016 to 2020, he served on the Board of Directors of the Sorrento Foundation, an organization dedicated to territorial promotion and marketing. Enthusiastic about politics, he has held the role of city councilor in Sorrento since 2020. Additionally, as of 2023, he is an Italian member of BELC (Building Europe with Local Councilors), a network promoted by the European Commission.