2nd Call for Papers

The Department of Applied Linguistics, the Department of English Studies of the Rzeszów University (Poland) and the Centre for Research, Didactics and Knowledge Transfer Text-Discourse-Communication invite you to the 55th Linguistics Colloquium. It will take place at the Rzeszów University, on 13-16 September 2020.

The leading topic of the Colloquium is:

Inter- and Intralinguistic Contrasts

We are interested in presentations, both theoretical and empirically-based, adopting the contrastive perspective within the following areas:

- particular subdisciplines of linguistics (morphology, syntax, semantics, lexicon, text linguistics and discourse studies),
- new tendencies in linguistic research,
- language-oriented contrastive culture studies,
- contrastive media linguistics,
- sociolinguistic analyses,
- translation theory and practice,
- analyses of specialized languages
- contrastive foreign language teaching,
- research areas, results and expectations in parallel linguistic disciplines in different countries, cultures and language communities.

Above all, we do not limit our interest to the areas listed, and, with the leading topic of the Colloquium in mind, we will be glad to accept other contributions devoted to a contrastive study of any language-related issue. Since a broad approach to the study of language is a characteristic feature of the Colloquium, we also wish to preserve this tradition and organize a session devoted to topics in language that do not adopt the contrastive perspective.

All researchers interested in participating in the conference are invited to deliver a paper or to present a poster. Papers will be allocated 20 minutes with additional 10 minutes for discussion.

Date: 13 Sept. 2020 – 16 Sept. 2020 (13 Sept. 2020 is the day of arrival)
